Applications are due Sept. 30.

John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation.

one of six finalists in 100&Change, a global competition for a single $100 million grant from the Foundation. The nonprofit was recently announced as a finalist in the competition.

Reminder: Report For America seeks host newsrooms to place 225 reporters in newsrooms across the country in 2020-21, including at KOSU, where half a reporter’s salary, up to $25,000. The newsroom and/or local donors split the rest.

We’re Engaged!

ISeeChange is recruiting more media groups to its network to help communities better understand climate trends. Each post is synced with weather and climate data and broadcast to the community to help people better understand climate change.

I see change seeks partners for climate change projects. Register here.

The hour-long webinar is at 1 p.m. ET/12 p.m. CT/10 a.m. PT today (Wednesday, August 19) on Zoom. The panel includes station event leaders from 88.9 Radio Milwaukee, WFYI and WBUR. The webinar will cover how stations have reimagined their event schedules to provide meaningful experiences for audiences, presenters and artists. It will also look at efforts around public media.

We've made some updates to our National Listening Sessions project! Registration links are now available for individual sessions around the following five topics:

- Mental well-being
- My community's future
- The American Dream
- Our money
- The impact of COVID-19 on our lives

Before the trip ends, Nate hopes to learn about what's on people's minds ahead of the election and will invite some to join him on the road for a virtual conversation after the trip ends. He hopes to learn about what's on people's minds ahead of the election.

The Mountain West News Bureau

Nate Hegyi of the Mountain West News Bureau will be leaving on his 900-mile bike ride at the end of August. The Mountain West is home to a quarter of the nation’s news deserts and, like much of the country, it’s enduring high unemployment, a surge in COVID-19 cases, as well as reckoning with a history of racism and police violence.

To learn more about what’s on the minds of residents here, Nate Hegyi, a rural reporter for our partner Mountain West News Bureau, is embarking on a 900-mile cycling trip to hold town hall meetings in Montana, Idaho, Wyoming and Colorado. He plans to interview 300 people, 20 each in the four states, to gather more in-depth understanding of what’s important to citizens. The collaboration has received more than 50 responses via Hearken. Five key takeaways will be publishing in September.

We're Engaged!

The Mountain West News Bureau is tracking Nate Hegyi’s 900-mile cycling trip across the continental divide. The trip will start on August 29 and last until September.

On your phone: Tap “Start talking into your mic (make sure it's red)” and dictate away! It's also can be turned on with TrueRemove. Other examples to engage the public include creating Election 2020 newsletters, hosting online conversations and using Google Forms.

I am interested in signing up to receive America Amplified's newsletters: TrueRemove.

Did you stumble upon us and find us awesome? You're the Boss is a collaboration between America Amplified and the USA Today Network.

Our weekly newsletters have covered a lot since launching in March, but you don’t have to miss out on past issues! We’re Engaged!

We've made some updates to our National Listening Sessions project! Registration links are now available for individual sessions around the following five topics:

- Mental well-being
- My community's future
- The American Dream
- Our money
- The impact of COVID-19 on our lives

Before the trip ends, Nate hopes to learn about what's on people's minds ahead of the election and will invite some to join him on the road for a virtual conversation after the trip ends. He hopes to learn about what's on people's minds ahead of the election.