The cowboy roaming horseback across the American West is nearly inextricable from what it means to be American. But in reality, most beef is raised out East where there's more grass, and only a tiny fraction of the beef in the West comes from cattle. Now a new generation of ranchers is working to reinvent this iconic American...