General Manager's Newsletter | September 2022

Around Wyoming

Indigenously significant areas," art, and live musical performances.

Wyoming Public Radio's News Director Bob Beck moderated a panel discussion on mental health, with a

A Native woman won the Democratic nomination in Wyoming's primary

Representative Liz Cheney loses to Trump-backed challenger in House primary

Harriet Hagemen wins Wyoming GOP Primary

Wyoming Public Media, as we know it today, didn’t exist.  It was KUWR, serving Laramie and listeners to support Wyoming Public Media in his own special style.

When it rains, it pours.  In the last month, WPM battled campus flood-related power outages in Laramie, water

d_SOCIALS"

The relationship connects NPR’s diverse collection of podcasts with YouTube’s audience of over 2 billion

She joins Here & Now from the San Francisco Chronicle.  Here & Now airs

Awards.  In 2019, she was chosen as a Fulbright Scholar to Several student groups stopped by the station during move-in week. Grady Kirkpatrick, Wyoming Public Media Program Director, offered information on volunteer and

The WPR news team enjoyed a training April 12-14 in Laramie with guests including Bureau/Wyoming Public Radio reporter.

Save September 15th at noon for a Facebook event that brings together several

BEYOND WYOMING

U.S. Representative Liz Cheney was ousted from her leadership role in the US House of Representatives on August 12, 2022.

The Wyoming Public Media team is excited to announce our new partnership with StoryCorps, the nonprofit that provides

A new season of The Individualist, which has

Please feel free to contact us by any convenient way at gm@wpm.org.