9pm Salt Babies (Wskg)

On the afternoon of March 6th 1962 a practical nurse working in the formula room at Binghamton General Hospital's maternity ward noticed the sugar container used for mixing infant formula was only half full. She took the can to the hospital's main kitchen to refill it. In the kitchen sitting side by side were two identical 20 gallon drums, one filled with salt the other with sugar. The nurse would later clearly remember reaching into the drum on the left and filling the formula room's container with two scoops from the can's contents that she assumed was sugar. It wasn't. The container the nurse would return to the formula room that afternoon was now partially filled with salt. Over the next 5 days the nurses working the ward would unknowingly feed the infants in the ward bottles of formula mixed with salt. The Salt Babies, a documentary from WSKG and filmmaker Brian Frey tells the tragic story that would unfold in General Hospitals Maternity Ward over the next week. Babies would die, lives would be shattered and when the tragedy was revealed to the public it would send shockwaves across the country and the world.

It's hard to imagine that large meteorites colliding with Earth with the power of 20 Hiroshima bombs can bring anything but cataclysm. Ever since a link was made between meteorite impacts and mass extinctions on Earth, we have feared rogue asteroids destroying our planet. There is no doubt, these objects can be takers of life - but is it possible that giant asteroid impacts were actually essential for the creation of life on Earth NOVA follows a series of discoveries behind a remarkable theory of how the violent destroyers of life could also have created the very special conditions - of chemistry and energy - that made life possible in the first place.

10:30pm Simon Schama:

The Holocaust, 80 Years On

In the year marking the 80th anniversary of the liberation of the last concentration camps, renowned historian Sir Simon Schama confronts the history of the Holocaust as not just a Nazi obsession, but as a European-wide crime. In the most personal and unflinching film of his career, Simon visits mass killing sites in Lithuania, the home of his mother's family. He travels to the Netherlands, a nation famed for its long history of tolerance and where he lived and worked as a young historian, to answer the question of why fewer Jews survived here than in any other Western occupied country. And despite a lifetime dedicated to documenting Jewish history, this film also captures the emotional toll of Simon's first ever visit to Auschwitz-Birkenau. Within all this terror, at every step Simon leans into remarkable acts of resistance, the compulsion of ordinary Jews to document the unprecedented atrocities that were happening to them, in the hope they could never be denied. Featuring an extraordinary interview with 98-year-old survivor Marian Turski, as well as the voices of younger generations determined to ensure the Holocaust is never forgotten, the film also asks profound questions about what the Holocaust means now.

WSKG
