Call The Midwife - Season 12
Sunday, March 19 at 8pm • details on page 6
The Ohio State University has named Anthony Padgett as the new Thomas Rieland Endowed General Manager of WOSU Public Media. Padgett brings more than 30 years of industry experience, most recently serving as president and CEO of South Carolina ETV (SCETV) in Columbia. His first day leading WOSU will be Monday, March 6.

"I am honored to be joining the team at WOSU and excited about the opportunity to build upon the station’s legacy of impact and service," Padgett said. "I believe this is a transformational time for public media and that we at WOSU can enhance the lives of those we serve like never before."

Padgett led the SCETV and SC Public Radio teams in providing valuable services, important information and compelling content to the state of South Carolina. Like WOSU Public Media, SCETV is grounded in an educational mission and community outreach.

“Anthony is an energetic and exciting public media leader with an extremely broad base of experience in digital media innovation, content development and inclusivity in program engagement,” said Betsy Pandora, executive director of the Short North Alliance and president of the Friends of WOSU Board.

During his tenure with SCETV, Padgett was active with multiple national and local organizations including the Organization of State Broadcast Executives, National Educational Telecommunications Association, Public Media Business Association, Greater Public, Affinity Group Coalition, American Public Television and the National EBS Association.

Padgett takes over for Ronnie Agnew who left WOSU Public Media in October 2022. Padgett becomes just the seventh leader in WOSU’s 100-year history.

“Anthony is the right person at the right time to lead WOSU,” said Jay Kasey, senior vice president of The Ohio State University’s Office of Administration and Planning. “He inherits a great media organization with a rich history and is well-positioned to help WOSU thrive in its new facility.”
Throughout March, you can support WOSU and get tickets to see Billy Joel and Stevie Nicks at Ohio Stadium on August 5.

When you become a sustaining member, we can offer these tickets as a thank you gift. We have a limited number of tickets so you must give now.

Thank you for supporting WOSU and we hope to see you at Billy Joel and Stevie Nicks.

89-7 NPR News – All You Need to Start Your Day

Mornings are driven by routine. We generally get up at the same time each day, prepare for work the same way, make the same stops on the way to work – even if we’re commuting from the kitchen to the home office.

For nearly 100,000 Central Ohioans each week, 89-7 NPR News is an essential part of their morning routines. We work hard to make sure listeners have everything they need to get off to a good start. NPR and Morning Edition report and explain national and international events. WOSU Morning News Anchor Steve Brown packs the most important Central Ohio stories into local updates every half hour. WOSU and Ohio Public Radio reporters provide hourly in-depth reports on the top Ohio stories of the day. Business reporters at Marketplace explain the latest economic news and the latest tech advances.

John Hill is one of the best traffic reporters in the country – providing timely and accurate updates on backups and advice on how to avoid them. We give you weather reports without the hype. We’ll let you know how the Blue Jackets did the night before.

Gateways Radio

A restaurant would call it an amuse-bouche, something to delight the palate. This month on Classical 101 you get a little taste of a series we’ll be airing this summer. Join us Sundays at 1pm for samples of the Gateways Radio Music Festival, a series featuring the music and musicians of the African diaspora.

The series is hosted by Garrett McQueen, and in the first concert alone you’ll hear music by composers like Gabriela Lena Frank, Scott Joplin and William Grant Still. Try to imagine Amazing Grace or There is a Balm in Gilead alongside movements from Bach’s Cello Suite No. 1. That’s how cellist Thapelo Masita performed them in recital at the Gateways Festival back in 2019. Hear that and series founder Armenta Hummings Dumisani playing Bach for keyboard on Sunday, March 26 at 1pm.

Metropolitan Opera

The Toll Brothers Metropolitan Opera Radio Broadcast season continues on March 4… with a surprise! It’s Listeners’ Choice: Great Met Broadcasts. American soprano Angel Blue takes the stage on March 11 as Violetta in Verdi’s La Traviata, then Sonya Yoncheva sings Bellini’s Norma on March 25. March 18th marks a new production of Wagner’s Lohengrin featuring Piotr Beczala in the title role.

Saturday opera broadcasts air at 1pm on Classical 101.

The American Sound

During Women’s History Month, celebrate the contributions of women composers and performers with The American Sound. Enjoy Barbara Harbach’s Visions of Hildegard and Florence Price’s powerful First Symphony – the first symphony by a Black American woman composer to be performed by a major U.S. orchestra. Let your spirit soar with Abbie Benetis’ transcendent choral work Be Like the Bird. Also enjoy the classical-bluegrass violinist Tessa Lark in Michael Torke’s “bluegrassical” violin concerto Sky. Join host Jennifer Hambrick for the American Sound, Saturdays at 6pm and Tuesdays at 7pm on Classical 101.

Symphony Showcase

Enjoy great French masterpieces this month, including Berlioz, Bizet, and Saint-Saëns with host Kent Teeters on Classical 101’s Symphony Showcase, Sundays at 6pm and Thursdays at 7pm.
