ALASKA PUBLIC MEDIA HONORED FOR EXCELLENCE IN JOURNALISM

Award-winning reporting that informs and connects Alaskans

Alaska Public Media is honored to have received several major journalism awards this summer—recognition that celebrates our commitment to storytelling that informs, inspires, and brings Alaskans closer to the issues that matter.

In July, we received three regional Edward R. Murrow Awards, one of the most prestigious honors in broadcast journalism. The Murrow Awards, named after legendary journalist Edward R. Murrow, recognize outstanding work in storytelling, integrity, and impact. We were awarded Overall Excellence, a testament to the strength of our entire news operation. Alaska News Nightly won in the Newscast category, and Liz Ruskin received the Hard News award for her insightful profile, "Meet Scott Kendall, Father of Alaska's Ranked Choice Voting and Lightning Rod for the Right."

We also received two Public Media Awards from NETA. Talk of Alaska was honored in News & Public Affairs and Environment categories, for the episode "The Potential for a Mount Spurr Eruption," which helped listeners understand the science and risks behind volcanic activity near Anchorage.

These awards affirm our mission to serve Alaskans with journalism that informs, engages, and empowers.

MEMBERSHIP MATTERS MORE THAN EVER

Your support keeps trusted news and programs strong across Alaska.

If you aren't already a Member, you may have wondered exactly what we mean when we say the word "Membership"? SIX NIGHTS, ONE EPIC STORY — AN AMERICAN REVOLUTION

Ken Burns' new series explores the fight for independence through untold voices and forgotten stories.

The story of America's fight for independence is one of ideals, contradictions, and the lives of countless individuals caught in the turbulence of revolution. This sweeping new documentary series from acclaimed filmmaker Ken Burns, co-directed with Sarah Botstein and David Schmidt, explores the Revolution not only as a military conflict, but also as a profound social and political upheaval. Through powerful storytelling, archival materials, and expert commentary, the film revisits the struggle for liberty while illuminating the experiences of everyday people—enslaved and free, Indigenous and immigrant, loyalist and patriot.

In Ken Burns American Revolution, we'll see familiar figures like George Washington, Benjamin Franklin, and Thomas Jefferson, yet the series also gives voice to those often left out of the narrative: women, people of color, and Native nations whose choices shaped and were shaped by the conflict. By broadening the lens, the filmmakers remind us that the Revolution was both a war for independence and a civil war that divided families and communities. It was also a global event, drawing in European powers and reshaping the balance of empires across the Atlantic world.

The series spans more than a decade of turmoil, tracing the sparks of rebellion through the war's bloody campaigns to the uncertain promise of a new nation. In doing so, it confronts the enduring tensions between the rhetoric of freedom and the realities of inequality. This is not only the story of America's founding, but also an exploration of how revolutions—messy, imperfect, and unfinished—continue to reverberate.

The six-part American Revolution begins Sunday, November 16 at 7 p.m. on Alaska Public Media, with new episodes each night through Friday, November 21. A special encore of the finale will air Sunday, November 23 during our live TV festival, offering viewers unique opportunities and special TV offers.

A CENTURY-LONG FIGHT FOR EQUALITY, RATIFIED

How generations of activists fought to enshrine gender equality in the U.S. Constitution.

The fight for equality under the law has spanned generations, and one of the longest-running efforts centers on adding gender equality to the U.S. Constitution. This powerful documentary traces the Equal Rights Amendment's (ERA) tumultuous journey, from its origins a century ago to the modern-day activists who refused to let it fade into history. While much of the story is told through archival material, the film continues into very recent years, culminating in 2020 when Virginia became the 38th state to ratify the ERA, and extending to the ongoing legal and political battles that have stretched into the 2020s.

Through intimate interviews and historical footage, Ratified highlights the voices of women and men— young and old, conservative and progressive—who came together to demand recognition of equal rights. The story recalls how the ERA became entangled in debates over workplace protections, reproductive rights, and pay equity, with opponents warning of unintended consequences while supporters argued that the amendment was a long-overdue guarantee of fairness. By showing these competing visions, the film sheds light on the stakes for both sides and why the struggle became so prolonged.

What emerges is not only the portrait of a single amendment, but also a testament to the power of grassroots activism and the endurance of democratic ideals. From marches at state capitols to quiet strategy sessions in living rooms, the documentary captures both the frustrations of stalled progress and the exhilaration of hard-won victories. It connects past to present, revealing how the questions first raised in the 1970s—about family, gender, and the law—continue to shape American politics and culture today.

Ratified, part of PBS's award-winning Independent Lens series, is a timely and thought-provoking exploration of a movement that refuses to be forgotten.

Tune in Monday, October 20 at 9 p.m. on Alaska Public Media TV.

A WORLD ON THIN ICE

Exploring the bond between walrus, people, and the changing Arctic.

In Alaska, the rhythm of life has always been tied to the sea—and few animals symbolize that bond more powerfully than the walrus. From the windswept shores of the Bering and Chukchi Seas to the traditions of Indigenous communities, these whiskered giants are part of the fabric of northern life. While the expedition follows walrus beyond Alaska's shores, the story it tells is inseparable from our own Arctic home, where climate change is reshaping both wildlife and communities.

Smithsonian scientist Kirk Johnson has spent three decades captivated by this remarkable creature. His journey across the Arctic uncovers the walrus's hidden history, from fossil records that tell of its evolutionary resilience to modern encounters that reveal its central role in Indigenous culture. For generations, the walrus has provided food, tools, and art, anchoring communities to the land and sea.

But today, the stakes are higher than ever. As sea ice retreats earlier each year, walrus are forced to crowd together on land in massive haul-outs, a dangerous shift that can lead to tragedy for calves and disruption for hunters who rely on them. The challenges unfolding thousands of miles away in the Arctic mirror what's happening right here in Alaska, where climate change is no longer a distant concept but a daily reality.

Walrus: Life on Thin Ice launches Season 44 of Nature with sweeping Arctic imagery and the passion of a scientist who has spent decades studying this remarkable creature. Stunning underwater scenes and vast aerial views reveal the walrus not as a curiosity, but as a sentinel for the North—a symbol of endurance and adaptation. Its story raises an urgent question: how will Alaska, and the animals and people who call it home, adapt to a world on thin ice?

Tune in Wednesday October 22 at 7 p.m. on Alaska Public Media TV, and again on November 24 during our Live TV Festival, when viewers will also have a chance to enjoy special offers.
