WORLD YOUTH WIND SYMPHONY

The Interlochen Bowl March..... Edwin Franko Goldman
(1878-1956)

Oh, sound the call to dear old Interlochen!
Land of the stately pine.
Where stalwart hands and loyal ever greet you,
Faithful for Auld Lang Syne.
Old friends you'll meet,
New ones you'll greet,
A welcome you'll ever find.
So sound the call to dear old Interlochen!
Shrine of the Muse divine.

PROGRAM NOTES

The Interlochen Bowl March

Edwin Franko Goldman

Instrumentation: piccolo, 2 flutes, oboe, E-flat clarinet, 3 clarinets, alto clarinet, bass clarinet, 2 alto saxophones, tenor saxophone, baritone saxophone, bassoon, 3 trumpets, 4 horns, 3 trombones, euphonium, tuba, timpani, 3 percussion, and double bass

Duration: 2 minutes

Composer Edwin Franko Goldman wrote "The Interlochen Bowl March" in 1934 to commemorate the dedication of the venue of the same name. The Interlochen Bowl is the oldest performance space at Interlochen Center for the Arts, and has hosted several notable composers and conductors including Howard Hanson, Percy Aldridge Grainger, and John Philip Sousa.

Known as one of America's most influential bandmasters, Goldman combined the brilliance of traditional American marches with a lyrical warmth that separates this work from many other American military marches. This march also features a very famous chorus, called "Sound the Call," which is sung during the trio of this work. This chorus evokes the stately pines of northern Michigan and the warmth and openness of Interlochen Arts Camp.

For generations, students, alumni, and audiences alike have grown to adore "The Interlochen Bowl March," and some even consider it to be the anthem of Interlochen. It serves as a musical symbol of tradition, fellowship, and the transformative power of the arts that is only found between the two lakes of Interlochen's magical campus.

Molly on the Shore

Percy Aldridge Grainger

Instrumentation: piccolo, flutes, E-flat clarinet, clarinet, bass clarinet, contrabass clarinet, soprano saxophone, bassoon, contrabassoon, alto saxophone, tenor saxophone, baritone saxophone, trumpets, horns, trombones, euphoniums, tuba, timpani, percussion, and celesta

Duration: 4 minutes

Born in Australia in 1882, Percy Grainger first composed "Molly on the Shore" for his mother in 1907. The piece pulls themes from two Irish reels, "Temple Hill" and the eponymous "Molly on the Shore." Originally written as a string quartet, Grainger arranged this tune several times: for full orchestra in 1914, for solo piano in 1918, and for band in 1920. The composer travelled across the British Isles collecting and transcribing folk melodies that are featured in many of his notable compositions like "Irish Tune from County Derry" and "Lincolnshire Posy.” In addition to being an immensely popular composer, Grainger was a world-class piano soloist, professor of music at New York University, and even taught at Interlochen’s National Music Camp.

“Molly on the Shore” highlights the woodwind sections, opening with a brisk rendition of the main theme and gradually adding players until the entirety of the woodwinds are playing. Utilizing countermelody, varying dynamics, and lyrical themes that contrast with the blazing fast main theme, Grainger manages to keep the audience on the edge of their seats throughout this up-tempo reel.

Spiritual Symphony

Benjamin Horne

Instrumentation: piccolo, 2 flutes, 2 oboes, 3 clarinets, bass clarinet, contrabass clarinet, 2 alto saxophones, tenor saxophone, baritone saxophone, 2 bassoons, contrabassoon, 3 trumpets, 4 horns, 4 trombones, euphonium, tuba, timpani, 5 percussion, piano, and double bass

Duration: 20 minutes

Born in 1995 in Baltimore, Maryland, Benjamin Horne is an emerging wind ensemble conductor and composer. Horne is currently pursuing his doctorate degree in wind conducting at Michigan State University; he has also studied at the Jacobs School of Music at Indiana University and the Schwob School of Music at Columbus State University.

Written in 2025, Spiritual Symphony was premiered by the Michigan State University Wind Symphony, conducted by the composer himself. The work is divided into four movements: “Drinkin’ Gourd/Wade in the Water,” “Motherless Child,” “Deep River,” and “What a Morning/Go Tell It.”

The work is a collection of settings of African American spirituals that synthesizes the individual movements into a larger symphonic work. “Follow the Drinking Gourd” is largely believed to have been a song used on the Underground Railroad for directions on how to escape capture. “Wade in the Water” is also used prevalently throughout the first movement, and is thought to have been used in the same way as the previous spiritual. “Motherless Child” is the spiritual featured heavily in the second movement; it is filled with anguish and a feeling of being lost. “Deep River” expresses a sense of hope and desire to cross over to a land of freedom and peace, while “My Lord, What a Morning” and “Go Tell It on the Mountain” feature biblical themes of rebirth and the coming of a new age.

—Program notes by Dylan Rosenthal

Les Préludes, Symphonic Poem No. 3

Franz Liszt

Instrumentation: piccolo, 2 flutes, 2 oboes, 2 clarinets, 2 bassoons, 4 horns, 2 trumpets, 3 trombones, tuba, alto saxophone, tenor saxophone, baritone saxophone, euphonium, timpani, percussion, harp, and strings

Duration: 15 minutes

An Interlochen tradition, “Les Préludes” is the third and most popular of Hungarian composer Franz Liszt’s 13 symphonic poems. Written between 1845 and its premiere in Weimar in 1854, this piece was originally conceived as an overture for the orchestrated version of one of his choral cycles, Les Quatre Éléments (The Four Elements). This orchestration was abandoned, but Liszt adapted the overture and titled it to refer to a poem of the same name by French poet Alphonse de Lamartine, who was a favorite of his longtime companion, the Polish princess Carolyne zu Sayn-Wittgenstein. This title and underlying program were not the composer’s initial intent for the work: they were only added when the work was nearly completed.

The initial publication of the score to “Les Préludes” in 1856 included an introduction by Sayn-Wittgenstein that mused over one of Lamartine’s poems on themes of love, nature, and death. This introduction, still printed in many scores to this day, begins with: “What else is our life but a series of preludes to that unknown Hymn, the first and solemn note of which is intoned by Death?” Unlike many tone poems by other composers (and even Liszt himself), this piece is a demonstration of a philosophical idea—not an implicit story like Richard Strauss’ Don Quixote or Rachmaninoff’s Isle of the Dead.

Much of the musical material from “Les Préludes” is adapted from themes in Les Quatre Éléments. The four movements of this work are: “Les Aquilons” (“The North Winds”), “La Terre” (“The Earth”), “Les Flots” (“The Floods”), and “Les Astres” (“The Stars”). Aspects of each of these movements can be heard within the roughly 17-minute work—from a tempestuous storm to pastoral scenes. The programmatic material is apt for Interlochen’s campus in northern Michigan: Students are likely to have experienced all of these elements of nature during their time at Camp.

The connection between “Les Préludes” and Interlochen began in 1928, when “Les Préludes” served as the final performance of the first National High School Orchestra Camp, conducted by Dr. Joseph Maddy. The piece was such a hit that it has been performed in the Interlochen Bowl during the final Sunday concert nearly every year since, with a few exceptions. This tradition continues to this day, with hundreds of people piling into the Bowl to witness the spectacle while students reminisce over their time at Camp and the new friends they met along the way.
