

The Secret Visitor in the Nature Princess's Garden

By Vaidehi G

Long ago, deep in a magical forest, there lived a Nature Princess.

Her garden was full of butterflies, singing birds, and bright flowers.

Every morning the Nature Princess walked through her garden happily.

She watered the flowers and softly talked to the trees.

One night something strange happened.

The leaves rustled in the wind, and she heard a tiny footstep.

"Hmm... who could be in my garden?" she wondered.

The next morning she asked her daughter,

"Did someone come to the garden last night?"

Her daughter giggled and said, "Maybe... or maybe it was magic!"

The Nature Princess became curious.

She followed tiny footprints that led across the grass.

They stopped near the tallest tree.

Suddenly a small voice said,

"Hello!"

A little forest fairy peeked out from behind the leaves.

"I came because your garden is the most beautiful garden in the forest," said the fairy.

"I wanted to help take care of it."

The Nature Princess smiled.

"You are not a stranger," she said kindly.

"You are a friend of nature."

Soon the little forest fairy began helping.

It watered flowers, guided butterflies, and sang with the birds.

The garden became even more magical.

The flowers bloomed brighter, and the trees grew taller and stronger.

The Nature Princess laughed happily.

"So the mysterious visitor was actually a helper!"

The birds chirped and the butterflies danced.

From that day on the Nature Princess knew:

Nature is happiest when everyone helps.

And the little fairy was always welcome in the magical garden.
