HELP MAKE THE CENTENNIAL A TRIUMPHANT SUCCESS! BY MATTHEW SHILVOCK
Help San Francisco Opera carry forward our legacy of bold, transformative art by making an extraordinary gift in support of the Centennial Season.

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL OF ALL EXISTING OPERAS: CREATING DIE FRAU OHNE SCHATTEN
BY LARRY WOLFF
Composer Richard Strauss’ collaboration with the writer Hugo von Hofmannsthal on Die Frau ohne Schatten occurred against the backdrop of World War I. But the opera’s redemptive faith in future generations was received with renewed appreciation by the postwar public at its premiere in 1919.

NOW AND THEN: DAVID HOCKNEY ON CREATING THE WORLD OF DIE FRAU OHNE SCHATTEN
James Farber chats with world-renowned artist David Hockney about the power of combining color and music, form and space, in creating the stunning, kaleidoscopic set of Strauss’ Die Frau ohne Schatten.

Welcome to the summer season of San Francisco Opera’s centennial year! We’re thrilled to be celebrating our 100th birthday with a season of premieres and exciting new productions that showcase the extraordinary artistry of this Company. Opera is a uniquely compelling, entertaining, and emotionally thrilling art form, and our mission is to make every performance in the War Memorial Opera House an event that will touch you deeply and that you’ll remember for years to come.

This summer we continue our centennial celebration with three very different operas exploring varied stories, in addition to our star-studded 100th Anniversary Concert on June 16. We present a fascinating new perspective on Puccini’s Madame Butterfly, a journey to the fairy-tale world of Strauss’ Die Frau ohne Schatten for the first time in 34 years, and a beautiful new work exploring the relationship between Frida Kahlo and Diego Rivera by Bay Area composer Gabriela Lena Frank.

Thank you for all you do to make this level of bold creativity and artistic excellence possible. If you are inspired to make a special centennial gift in support of this season, we encourage you to read more from our general director, Matthew Shilvock, on page 62. Your support is greatly needed and appreciated. Thank you for being a part of something quite extraordinary, and we hope you enjoy this magnificent season!

Sincerely,

John A. Gunn

PS. From Keith Geeslin

This is my last season as President of the San Francisco Opera Association. I have been privileged to serve in this role for a decade, through times of great challenge and great artistic triumphs. Our spectacular Centennial Season requires an immense investment of time, talent, and resources, and your dedication and support make it possible. The Opera couldn’t have weathered the pandemic, and certainly wouldn’t be approaching the future so optimistically, without our steadfast community of devoted opera lovers. It’s wonderful to be sharing the power of live musical experiences together again and to witness this community’s passion for San Francisco Opera, a company which means so much to me. Thank you!

Once again, the unprecedented generosity of Cynthia and John Gunn has set the stage for a dazzling season at San Francisco Opera. Since 2002, when John joined the Opera Board, the couple has underwritten numerous productions and provided exceptional support for many of the Company’s innovative endeavors. In September 2008, the Gunns made a historic commitment—believed to be the largest gift ever made by individuals to an American opera company—to help fund the signature projects of then-General Director David Gockley, including new operas and productions, multimedia projects, and outreach programs, and they have proudly continued that support for General Director Matthew Shilvock. This season, the Gunns’ inspired generosity is helping make possible four productions—Antony and Cleopatra, Eugene Onegin, La Traviata, and El último sueño de Frida y Diego. The Gunns invite everyone to give and join them as a member of San Francisco Opera’s donor community. John comments, “Opera is a dynamic art form, and all of us play a role in keeping it a meaningful part of our social fabric. With you we can propel San Francisco Opera into its next 100 years of artistic history.” John is the former chairman and CEO of Dodge & Cox Investment Managers. He joined the firm in 1972, the year he received his MBA from Stanford Business School and married Cynthia, who graduated from Stanford with an A.B. in political science in 1970. Early in her career, Cynthia was the editor and director of The Portable Stanford book series for ten years. She edited twenty-eight books by Stanford professors on a vast array of topics, including Economic Policy Beyond the Headlines by George Shultz and Ken Dam. In addition to their support of San Francisco Opera, the Gunns are active members of the community. John is a former trustee of Stanford University and is Chairman Emeritus of the Advisory Board for the Stanford Institute for Economic Policy Research. Cynthia currently serves as a trustee of the Fine Arts Museums of San Francisco, is a former overseer of Stanford’s Hoover Institution, and has been a member of the advisory board of Family and Children Services and the board of the Lucile Packard Foundation for Children’s Health. Opera lovers are grateful to Cynthia and John and applaud their commitment to keeping San Francisco Opera a leading-edge company.

Barbara A. Wolfe (Production Sponsor, Die Frau ohne Schatten)
Barbara Wolfe has been a longtime opera fan and supporter of San Francisco Opera. Works of Mozart and Wagner, and operas in the classical Italian tradition are particular favorites. Most recently, Barbara supported the Company’s new productions of La Traviata, Don Giovanni, and Tosca as well as the 2018 Ring cycle. With her late husband Tom, Barbara also sponsored Tamahäuser, Tristan und Isolde, The Magic Flute, Mefistofele, Norma, and Don Carlo. Barbara serves on the boards of the San Francisco Opera Association and San Francisco SPCA and was a longtime trustee at Mills College. She has supported educational programs and scholarships at several primary and secondary schools, graduate scholarship and fellowship programs at UCSF Foundation, and the Achievement Rewards for College Scientists program in Northern California. Barbara is also a supporter of the Fine Arts Museums of San Francisco, as well as numerous humanitarian and animal welfare organizations.

Jerome L. & Thao N. Dodson (Production Sponsor, Die Frau ohne Schatten and Madame Butterfly)
“Hi-Yo, Silver!”
Those words, accompanied by the galloping excitement of Rossini’s William Tell Overture, transfix a young Jerry Dodson as he listened to The Lone Ranger on the family radio in Oak Park, Illinois. Just as Bugs Bunny’s Rabbit of Seville had done for many, a lighthearted entertainment sparked a future operatic devotion.
That little boy grew up to attend Berkeley in the 60s, serve with the Foreign Office in Vietnam where he and Thao met, and attend Harvard Business School. Eventually, the couple married, settled in the Bay Area, and raised a family. In the 1980s, Jerry was a pioneer in the field of socially responsible investing with little interest in opera. But in 1992, when San Francisco Opera decided to celebrate Rossini’s bicentennial with the rarely performed Guillaume Tell, Thao, already an opera lover, suggested to Jerry that they go.
Tell was praised for its striking Mansouri production, and the Dodsons began attending regularly. They became season ticket holders in 1999 and supporters, “in a small way,” as Jerry puts it. A friendship with David Gockley, which endures to this day, led to a larger role as Company Sponsors. “I so admired what he did for the opera, but it was not very good for my pocketbook,” Jerry laughs. Jerry also lends his financial expertise to the audit committee.
In 2016, Dodson considered the import of Gockley’s departure. He met with Matthew Shilvock and joined the Board that year. “We hit it off right away!” Jerry says. He felt a similar affinity with Keith Geeslin, President of the San Francisco Opera Association. Eager to continue support, the Dodsons see the Centennial Season as a perfect time to revitalize and energize the Company within the San Francisco community. The initial fire ignited by William Tell continues to burn brightly.

Bob Ellis (Production Sponsor, El último sueño de Frida y Diego)
Bob has been a longtime supporter of contemporary opera since he became a member of the board of directors in 2001. He has supported all of John Adams’ new productions for San Francisco Opera, beginning with the commission of Doctor Atomic in 2005 and continuing with Girls of the Golden West in 2017 and, and this past fall’s Antony and Cleopatra. Along with Gabriela Lena Frank’s El último sueño de Frida y Diego, other production sponsorships have included Douglas Moore’s The Ballad of Baby Doe, Olivier Messiaen’s Saint François d’Assise, and the 2011 premiere of Francesca Zambello’s production of Wagner’s Ring cycle. He has also served on the boards of Opera Parallèle, OPERA America, and Central City Opera.

Louise Gund (Production Sponsor, Die Frau ohne Schatten)
Louise Gund has a lifelong passion for the arts and is both a photographer and a theatrical producer. She has produced twelve Broadway plays and musicals, winning a Tony Award and Drama Desk Award for All the Way, and receiving three additional Tony Award nominations. A subscriber to San Francisco Opera since 2010, Louise has served on the Opera’s board of directors since 2013. She has also served on the boards of the Oregon Shakespeare Festival, Cal Performances, Earthjustice, and the Berkeley Community Chorus and Orchestra. In addition to her major support of these organizations, she is an environmental activist and a staunch advocate on behalf of women’s and children’s issues. She was awarded the San Francisco Opera Spirit of the Opera Award in 2019 for devoted service to the Company, and was the inspiration behind the Opera’s Producers Circle. Louise is passionate about enabling creativity to flourish, telling stories of meaning, and ensuring a vibrant future for the arts.

Burgess & Elizabeth Jamieson (Production Sponsor, Madame Butterfly)
Libby and Burgess Jamieson have made an extraordinary commitment to San Francisco Opera for more than three decades by supporting traditional classical productions. Their ongoing generosity has ensured an enduring place on the War Memorial Opera House stage for such applauded and memorable works as Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg, Il Trittico, La Bohème, Madame Butterfly, Turandot, Tosca, and La Traviata. They consider their sustained support of the arts, and especially of San Francisco Opera, as a means of preserving important cultural links for future generations. “Libby and I believe in the enduring love of great works appealing to seasoned and new audiences alike and which attract the next generation of opera lovers,” Burgess says. “We are so pleased to play a role in bringing Madame Butterfly to the stage. We have a special fondness for supporting Puccini operas and look forward to this grand production, especially as it features Music Director Eun Sun Kim, who will conduct such outstanding artists as Karah Son, making her Company debut, and Michael Fabiano.” With more than 45 years of experience in private and public investment management, Burgess is active on the San Francisco Opera’s Board of Directors and its investment committee.

Koret Foundation (Production Sponsor, El último sueño de Frida y Diego)
San Francisco Opera is deeply grateful to Koret Foundation for its support of El último sueño de Frida y Diego. This funding is part of the Foundation’s generous three-year grant in support of new works in this Centennial Season and beyond. “Koret is pleased to celebrate San Francisco Opera’s Centennial Season with this exciting new work and looks forward to more opportunities to bring new voices and stories to the opera stage,” says Jeffrey A. Farber, Koret Foundation CEO. Koret has been a longtime supporter of San Francisco Opera’s transformational stage productions, as well as education and community programs. Most recently, Koret supported the reopening of the Opera House after the pandemic with a generous grant in support of Beethoven’s Fidelio in 2021. “We are honored by Koret’s longstanding partnership which helps us bring the best quality opera to the broadest audiences in ways that are reflective of and relevant to our community,” says General Director Matthew Shilvock.

Bernard & Barbro Osher (Production Sponsor, Die Frau ohne Schatten)
A native of Maine, Bernard Osher became involved with San Francisco Opera as a subscriber over 50 years ago, shortly after moving here from New York. He and his wife, Barbro, a native of Sweden, have supported every aspect of the Company’s work, from artist appearances to production facilities to audience building programs. Established in 1977, The Bernard Osher Foundation has funded virtually every major arts organization in the area, including youth programs. Higher education initiatives include scholarships for community college students in California and Maine and for baccalaureate students at universities in every state and the District of Columbia; Osher Lifelong Learning Institutes, serving adults on 125 campuses nationwide; and Osher Centers for Integrative Health at ten of the nation’s leading medical schools and at the Karolinska Institute in Stockholm, Sweden. Bernard is a longstanding member of the Opera’s Board of Directors, serving on the Chairman’s Council. Barbro is Honorary Consul General of Sweden for California and serves as Chairman of the Board of the Osher Foundation. Together they recently established the Osher Audience of the Future Fund, which gives San Francisco Opera an incredible resource to connect art and audiences together in new ways, ensuring that the Osher Theatre (War Memorial auditorium) remains a vibrant, energized, and full-to-the-rafters building in which to experience transformational opera.

Denise Littlefield Sobel (Production Sponsor, El último sueño de Frida y Diego)
Denise Littlefield Sobel is a philanthropist with a longstanding interest in the visual and supporting arts. She is at the forefront of several initiatives to promote diversity within the arts, and serves on several diversity committees for various nonprofits. Supporting DEI at San Francisco Opera has been a particular passion. When Matthew Shilvock first told Denise that SF Opera was commissioning El Sueño di Frida y Diego, its first opera in Spanish, she eagerly offered her support. In addition to supporting San Francisco Opera, she is an active supporter of numerous cultural institutions around the world, including several museums, such as The Fine Arts Museums of San Francisco, SFMoMA, the National Museum of Women in the Arts, the Musée d’Orsay in Paris. She is Chair of the Board of Trustees at the Clark Art Institute in Williamstown, MA. A passionate advocate for diversity in dance and choreography, she supports a wide range of companies, including Alvin Ailey, ABT, Fall for Dance at NY City Center, Jacob's Pillow, the Joffrey, Joyce, Kyle Abraham’s A.I.M., and, of course, the San Francisco Ballet. At the Paris Opera and Ballet, she continues to promote the expansion of a health center for dancers. In 2019, the French government presented Sobel with the country’s highest civilian honor, naming her a Chevalier of the Légion d’honneur, in recognition of her extraordinary contributions to French culture. In 2013, Sobel created the Tikkim Olam Foundation, Inc. where she serves as President, focusing on women's health, gender justice, and reproductive rights. A native of San Francisco and a resident of New York City, Sobel is active in several charities in both cities and has served on other nonprofit boards, including the American Red Cross of Greater New York, which honored her with the 2022 Humanitarian Award, Congregation Rodeph Sholom, and Chicago’s Auditorium Theatre, where she has been honored for her ongoing support of dance programs and historic preservation. The youngest child of Edmund Wattis Littlefield and Jeannik Méquet Littlefield, she continues her parents’ wonderful legacy of support of San Francisco Opera through her own philanthropy, and management of the Edmund W. and Jeannik Méquet Littlefield Endowment Fund, which provides a permanent and unrestricted source of income for the Company. In 2021, she and her brother, Ed Littlefield, Jr., received the Crescendo Award, bestowed by the San Francisco Opera Guild, for their family’s half-century support of San Francisco Opera.

Maria Manetti Shrem has enjoyed extraordinary success in business, in particular in the fashion industry, where she played a major role in establishing Gucci as a truly global force. Today, her focus is philanthropy, and she has made no secret of the fact that she and her husband, Jan Shrem, aim to give away the bulk of their wealth in their lifetimes.

“I want to give with my warm hands, not after passing,” Manetti Shrem says. “And we want to inspire other wealthy people to give now. For me, the art of living is the art of giving.” Since the mid-1990s, Manetti Shrem has contributed generously in the San Francisco Bay Area, New York, the U.K., and Italy, where she was born, in Florence.

Maria and Jan have been San Francisco Opera supporters since 1985 and have provided significant support for opera artists through the establishment of four major funds. Through the Great Interpreters of Italian Opera Fund, they support many classic works of the Italian repertoire, including this season’s La Traviata and Madame Butterfly. Through the Conductors Fund, appearances of renowned conductors are assured at San Francisco Opera, this season for Eugene Onegin and Orpheus and Eurydice. Through the Emerging Stars Fund, Jan and Maria help bring some of opera’s most exciting rising talents to the stage. And finally, the Luminaries Concert Fund enables San Francisco Opera to bring legendary artists to the stage for special events and performances.

Maria counts sopranos Renée Fleming and Nadine Sierra, tenor Michael Fabiano, and baritone Lucas Meachem as personal friends and was especially close to Luciano Pavarotti, treating the legendary tenor as family whenever he performed in San Francisco. Beyond their support for education, fine arts, and music, the Manetti Shrems have been generously supporting causes in medical research and science, focusing on communities of need, particularly the elderly and children. A few years ago, the president of Italy bestowed upon Maria Manetti Shrem the title of Grand Officer of the Order of the Star of Italy for her consistent support of cultural collaboration between Italy and the U.S. In June 2022, the Mayor of San Francisco, London Breed, along with the City and the County, proclaimed “June 22 Manetti Shrem Day for Philanthropy.”

In December 2022, she received The Spirit of the Opera award for her devotion to San Francisco Opera, her high level of commitment to advancing the success of the Company and her ongoing support of the art form. She is the 2023 UC Davis Medal recipient for her profound arts legacy and passion for creating opportunities for exploration and education.
San Francisco Opera is honored to recognize donors for their support of Gabriela Lena Frank and Nilo Cruz’s El último sueño de Frida y Diego and their participation in this special giving circle—El Círculo de Frida y Diego. From the names of the levels, to the gift amounts and benefits, each level was created to reflect an important part of the opera and inspire a deeper connection to the work. This community-based effort welcomes new supporters who, together, are helping to bring this work to life. There is still time to join El Círculo by calling (415) 565-3212. Donors will be added to our digital recognition and will receive a special commemorative pin! Please see page 24 for more details. This listing reflects gifts received through May 10, 2023.

Donations cover more than 80% of the Opera’s costs. To learn more about making a gift, visit sfopera.com/give or call (415) 565-3212.
Incredible passion fuels the very business model of opera. From the Renaissance to now, this most gloriously all-encompassing art form has thrived because of the passionate generosity of patrons, be they monarchs, governments, or, in the case of the United States, individuals like YOU! The fusion of singing, music, and theater requires a significant financial investment, but the impact is transformational, creating experiences that linger in our hearts and souls for decades.

Opera economics are exceptionally fragile and have become ever more so over the decades. The percentage of our costs covered by sales has diminished from the 1960s, to a point where only 16% of our costs are covered by tickets. For every $100 you spend on a ticket, we have to bring in an additional $500 from other sources. Government support is only 0.5% of our budget and corporate support has, with a few loyal exceptions, largely disappeared over the last decade. As another form of donor support, around 15% of our budget comes from our endowment.

- As indicated above, our annual fund has remained ostensibly flat for over 15 years, while costs have escalated by around 3% a year.
- The 20% decline of subscription during the pandemic caused a related drop in donors.
- To attract new audiences, we need new products. Our future demands that we invest in new ways of engaging with the public as we have done this Centennial Season. Such experimentation adds to the philanthropic need but is critical to our survival.

The possibilities of this season are thrilling! We are bringing to life two new operas, three new productions, two new co-productions, a traveling Bohème in a shipping container, bold new ticket programs, a full season of livestreams, and so much more. Eun Sun Kim is taking the musical values of the Company to an extraordinary level. And we are seeing an unprecedented number of new ticket buyers coming through the doors.

We have an urgent need for additional philanthropy to make possible this bold season. We still have $3M of new funds to raise before July 31 to ensure that this Centennial Season be both an artistic and a financial triumph. Your help can get us there.

I humbly ask you to reach as deeply as you are able to in support of this extraordinary Centennial Season. No gift is too small or large. If you have already given, please consider an additional gift in support of the Centennial. If you have not yet given, there has never been a better chance to become a part of this company. The Ann and Gordon Getty Foundation for the Arts is generously matching new and increased gifts made before July 31 such that your gift will be tripled in impact. We also have some very exciting new giving programs like El Círculo de Frida y Diego (see page 24).

The success of this season, artistically and financially, will do much to set the foundation for the future of the Company. You have held the legacy of San Francisco Opera in your hearts and hands for the last hundred years. Please help us carry forward that legacy by making an extraordinary gift in support of the Centennial and affirming the vital importance of this moment in our storied history.

Thank you for believing in the future of San Francisco Opera. To donate, please visit sfopera.com/give or call (415) 565-3212.

100 YEARS
THE FUTURE OF OPERA
Die Frau ohne Schatten

ACT I

SCENE 1: The Empress’ handmaiden, the Nurse, keeps watch while the Empress sleeps. A Messenger of Keikobad (the Empress’ father) declares that if the Empress does not cast a shadow within three days, the Emperor will turn to stone.

The Emperor appears and tells of how, while hunting, his falcon grazed the forehead of a gazelle, causing it to transform into a woman. In anger at the bird for having violated the woman, the Emperor threw his dagger at the falcon. He goes off in search of the falcon as he declares that everything he does is for love of the Empress.

The Empress awakens. She explains that since being wounded she can no longer transform herself. She sees the falcon and calls to it. It tells her that she does not cast a shadow and the Emperor will turn to stone.

The Nurse explains that they must travel down to the world of humankind and steal a shadow from a living being. She describes the horrors of the human realm, but the Empress naively demands to be taken there.

SCENE 2: The Dyer’s Wife awakens from sleep as her husband’s brothers fight. They threaten her until her husband, Barak, comes in. She tells him that she does not feel cared for. Barak does not understand. He asks her to give him children, reminding her of their marriage vows and his oath to provide for her and any children they might have. She responds that it is he who has not been able to give her children. She has had to give up any hope of this and so must he. Barak assures her he will be patient until she changes her mind. He goes off to sell cloth at the market.

The Nurse and Empress appear. They flatter the Dyer’s Wife and tempt her with gold. An image of a young man emerges as the Wife gazes into a mirror, but this dream soon vanishes. The Nurse explains that in order to give up her shadow, the Wife must forswear motherhood. The Wife agrees to withhold intimacy from Barak. The Nurse assures her that she and the Empress will remain in the house as her servants. The Nurse conjures a fire and a meal of fish for Barak and magically divides their marriage bed in two. The Nurse and Empress disappear as the Wife hears the sounds of unborn children coming from the frying pan. Barak returns to find that now he sleeps alone. Outside the night watchmen sing the praises of conjugal love.

ACT II

SCENE 1: Barak prepares to leave for market as his Wife adorns herself in the mirror. Once alone, the Nurse again conjures the appearance of the young man. The Empress cries out in horror to see Barak’s Wife tempted by a creature without a heart. Barak returns with his brothers and a group of beggar children.

SCENE 2: The Falcon leads the Emperor to the Falcon house. The Emperor expects to find the Empress asleep, watched over by the Nurse, but the house is empty. As the Empress and Nurse return, the Emperor senses they have descended to the human realm and reacts in jealousy that he has been betrayed.

SCENE 3: The Nurse gives Barak a sleeping potion and again conjures the image of the boy. Incapable of going through with making love to him, Barak’s wife awakens Barak and berates him for not keeping her safe. In a daze, Barak confesses his fear of not being able to provide for her. Enraged that he continues not to understand her, his wife leaves the house, telling him she might never return.

SCENE 4: Half asleep, the Empress struggles with feelings of guilt for considering betraying Barak by stealing his wife’s shadow. She falls asleep and has a dream that the Emperor is doomed. She decides that she would rather turn to stone herself.

SCENE 5: Barak’s Wife declares that she has forsweared motherhood, sold her shadow and has been with another man. Enraged, Barak threatens to kill her. Unseen forces overwhelm the house and the two of them are torn apart.

ACT III

SCENE 1: In the realm of Keikobad, Barak’s Wife is filled with guilt and declares her love for her husband, wishing to be reunited with him. Barak in turn longs for the chance to be with his wife.

SCENE 2: The Nurse and the Empress are brought by an oarless boat to the door of a temple. The Nurse cautions the Empress that Keikobad is fearsome and he will destroy her. The Empress is not afraid. She rejects the Nurse.

SCENE 3: The Empress faces her father, Keikobad, and asks to be judged for not stealing the shadow. She is offered the option of gaining the shadow by drinking from the fountain of life, but she cannot sacrifice Barak and his Wife. The Emperor is turned to stone. When the Empress still refuses to take the shadow, the Emperor is restored to life. The Empress casts a shadow.

SCENE 4: Barak and his Wife find each other with the help of the Empress and Emperor. The voices of unborn children encourage them to reject fear and remind them that we are both guest and host.

On January 26, 1911, Der Rosenkavalier had its triumphant premiere in Dresden, and on March 20 the librettist Hugo von Hofmannsthal wrote from Vienna to the composer Richard Strauss in Bavaria proposing a new project. “If we wanted once again to work on something big it would have to have strong and colorful action,” wrote Hofmannsthal. “I have something quite definite in mind which fascinates me very much ... It is a magic fairy tale in which two men and two women encounter one another.” Strauss was immediately interested, and they were both intrigued by the idea of Mozart’s The Magic Flute as the model for a German-language fairy-tale opera. Neither, however, could imagine that their collaboration on Die Frau ohne Schatten would take place in the apocalyptic context of World War I, and that by the time the opera had its premiere in 1919 their whole world would be utterly transformed.

In The Magic Flute a fairy-tale prince and princess, Tamino and Pamina, are tested to prove that they are worthy to rule. In Die Frau ohne Schatten there would be a fairy-tale emperor and empress, and the empress would be tested, as she sets out to find a shadow, achieve fertility, and learn what it means to be human and humane. Emperors and empresses did exist in 19th-century children’s fairy tales—as in Hans Christian Andersen’s tale of the nightingale who sang for the Chinese emperor—but in 1911 there were also real emperors who still ruled all over Europe. Hofmannsthal in Vienna was a subject of Habsburg Emperor Franz Joseph, who ruled over the Austro-Hungarian empire, while Strauss was a subject of the German Kaiser Wilhelm II. Tsar Nicholas ruled over the Russian empire, and even George V in London was not only king of England but also emperor of India.

In 1911, when Hofmannsthal proposed the new opera, there took place in Austria the ceremonious royal wedding of a Habsburg imperial heir, second in line, the 24-year-old future Emperor Karl, marrying a Bourbon princess, the 19-year-old future Empress Zita. The outcome of World War I meant that they would be the very last Habsburg emperor and empress, being banished from Austria in 1919, the same year that the fairy-tale emperor and empress of Die Frau ohne Schatten made their first appearance on the stage of the Vienna State Opera.

With the success of Der Rosenkavalier, Strauss and Hofmannsthal became the most important creative team in the post-Wagnerian German-language opera world, and they would work together until Hofmannsthal’s early death in 1929. They largely collaborated by letter, and their correspondence was preserved. “Die Frau ohne Schatten could, I sometimes think, become the most beautiful of all existing operas,” wrote Hofmannsthal on June 15, 1911—and then on June 27, uneasily, “My dear Dr. Strauss, What is the matter with you? I am quite uneasy when I do not hear from my alter ego for so long.” Through the letters we probably know more about their creative collaboration than any other in the history of opera.

The first scene of Die Frau ohne Schatten begins on the imperial roof terrace, where the Empress awakens, accompanied by harp and solo violin; she receives a magical message from the Emperor’s falcon and resolves to go down into the human city in search of a human shadow—guided by her deceitful and manipulative Nurse. The human world of Barak the Dyer and his moody discontented wife (whose shadow the Empress covets) is introduced with a cacophonous interplay of percussion and machine instruments: timpani, rods, castanets, wind machine, bass drum, tam-tam, and two large Chinese gongs.

“I would like to draw all your attention to the Empress,” wrote Hofmannsthal to Strauss on July 25, 1914. “There is always a spiritual light coming from her, and the stages on her road to humanity are marked as if by luminous flame.” It was not unusual for Hofmannsthal to feel a certain infatuation for his female soprano creations—like the Marschallin in Der Rosenkavalier and Ariadne in Ariadne auf Naxos—but this letter about the Empress was written one week before all of Europe went up in flames with the outbreak of World War I. Hofmannsthal was immediately called up for military service as a reserve officer, causing great distress to Strauss on account of the unfinished opera. Strauss wrote to Hofmannsthal’s wife, “Hugo has...
“I would like to draw all your attention to the Empress,’ wrote Hofmannsthal to Strauss … ‘There is always a spiritual light coming from her, and the stages on her road to humanity are marked as if by luminous flame.”

the damned duty not to die for the fatherland before I have my third act.” In fact, Hofmannsthal was moved to a desk job and spent the war writing patriotic essays for the Habsburg empire, but the slow progress of the opera now occurred against the backdrop of the most terrible war (until then) in European history, with ten million soldiers actually dying for their fatherlands.

There are parts of the score which feel deeply marked by the wartime conditions. The solemn unison trio for the night watchmen at the conclusion of Act I blesses the reproductive coupling of young spouses: “You spouses who lie lovingly in each other’s arms, you are the bridge that extends over the abyss by which the dead return to life!” The hymnal setting with pianississimo trumpets and trombones suggested that, for Strauss, “the dead” were no longer an abstraction of the libretto, now with young men lying dead on the battlefields. At the opening of Act III, the Dyer and his wife have been separately imprisoned by higher spirit powers and they long for each other in their loneliness and separation, as husbands and wives must surely have done all over Europe.

At the climax of the third act the Empress discovers her husband, the Emperor, turned to stone and realizes that only by refusing to accept the other woman’s shadow can she bring him back to life. The Emperor then sings, as if emerging from paralysis in a tenorial trance: “The dead shall rise out of the tomb of his own body.” He has a vision of the unborn children of the future descending “like starlight”—and the Empress, looking up, sees them as winged cherubim. While the word “unborn” was appropriated in the American abortion debate in the late 20th century, it had no such meaning for Strauss and Hofmannsthal in the early 20th century. The unborn children represented, in wartime, the unborn generation of the future, what we might call “posterity.” Hofmannsthal imagined the children’s chorus sounding “as if birds were suddenly speaking from the sky,” and Strauss created magical effects with the triangle and celesta. The redemptive magic of the unborn children was intended to heal a world destroyed by war.

Halfway through the war, in 1916, the 86-year-old Emperor Franz Joseph died at Schönbrunn Palace in Vienna, after a reign of 68 years. The young Karl and Zita now came to the throne and reached out secretly to American President Woodrow Wilson, seeking to extricate Austria-Hungary from the war but ultimately failing to do so. The eventual defeat of Germany and Austria-Hungary meant the abolition of the Habsburg empire, confirmed by Wilson at the Paris Peace Conference of 1919.
Hofmannsthal and Strauss had agreed that they would hold back the performance of Die Frau ohne Schatten until the war was over. They, however, imagined a German and Austrian victory, the triumph of the emperors, and instead the opera had its premiere in Vienna in 1919 after ignominious defeat and unconditional surrender, after the emperors and empresses were unceremoniously removed from European political life. Thus, in 1919, Karl and Zita were compelled to leave Austria, the same year that their operatic counterparts stepped onto the stage in Vienna as fairy-tale figures. Indeed, from that moment emperors and empresses would be increasingly regarded as fairy-tale figures all over the world.

The roles of the Empress and the Dyer’s Wife were taken in 1919 by two of the greatest singers of the 20th century: Czech soprano Maria Jeritza and German soprano Lotte Lehmann, respectively. The glamorous Jeritza knew (and apparently flirted with) both the old Emperor Franz Joseph and the young Emperor Karl. Jeritza and Lehmann would move on to glorious careers in the United States, with Jeritza singing her signature roles in San Francisco, including Carmen, Tosca, Turandot, and Salome, between 1928 and 1937, and Lehmann making her San Francisco Opera debut in 1934 and performing her legendary Marschallin there between 1940 and 1946.

Die Frau ohne Schatten was received respectfully in Vienna in 1919, and the figure of Barak the Dyer was particularly appreciated as a loving portrait of an ordinary Viennese craftsman. Yet, Hofmannsthal always regretted that Die Frau ohne Schatten had missed its moment by arriving in the catastrophic aftermath of the War, and he did not live long enough to witness the brilliant rediscovery of the opera following World War II.

The Vienna Opera House was partly destroyed by Allied bombing in 1945, and when it was rebuilt and reopened in postwar Austria in 1955 a new production of Die Frau ohne Schatten was featured. Four years later, in 1959, the American premiere took place in San Francisco. The opera’s quest for humanity, its reconciliation of rulers and subjects, its redemptive faith in future generations as yet unborn was now received with renewed appreciation by the postwar public, responding to what Hofmannsthal back in 1911 imagined might become “the most beautiful of all existing operas.”

NOW AND THEN:

David Hockney on Creating the World of Die Frau ohne Schatten

BY JAMES FARBER
It's early evening in Normandy, France, as David Hockney’s Zoom image appears on the screen. He is dapper as ever wearing a cream-colored jacket, a crisp white shirt with a black and white polka dot tie. His head is covered in a British style country cap, his glasses frames are yellow and there is, of course, a cigarette in his hand.

“There are just, the three of us,” he explains. “We’re living here in the middle of a field on about five acres of land. There’s a river running at the bottom, a little road at the top, and the only buildings we can see are the studio and a storeroom, and it’s falling down—we’ll have to do something about that,” he adds parenthetically.

“It’s very, very beautiful. We’re about 10 miles from the coast. I don’t mind being stuck here. During the pandemic we couldn’t have any visitors. I could just work. I never left this place for more than a year.”

The inspiration for our conversation is San Francisco Opera’s revival of Hockney’s luminous production of Richard Strauss’ mythic opera Die Frau ohne Schatten, first presented in 1992 at the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden, with performances in 1993 in Los Angeles and then in Australia, where Hockney remembers fondly they were given three weeks on stage to perfect the complex lighting design that plays such a crucial role.

Flashback to October 1993. David Hockney, director John Cox, and Los Angeles Opera’s executive director, Peter Hemmings, are gathered for a news conference at the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion to discuss the creation of Die Frau ohne Schatten. When a question is asked regarding Hockney’s striking use of color, his response, as always, is honest and revealing.

“I’d seen two or three productions of it. I loved the music but frankly the productions hadn’t been very memorable. But honestly, I find most opera productions don’t stick in the memory. I felt it called for color, because color and music combined can be very powerful. I think most people in the theater avoid using color because they’re afraid of it. Color, tone, and line are terms that can be applied to pictures and music. It’s a question of finding exactly the right equivalents.”

In response, Cox (who had worked with Hockney on productions of The Rake’s Progress, The Magic Flute, and

“Those ‘Snail Space Paintings’ looked abstract, but they were really studies about form and space. ‘They were not meant as sets, but when I was painting them, Strauss’ music was always in the back of my mind. That’s when I discovered you could make the color fields shift and change perspective by changing the colors of the light.”

—DAVID HOCKNEY

“It’s very, very beautiful. We’re about 10 miles from the coast. I don’t mind being stuck here. During the pandemic we couldn’t have any visitors. I could just work. I never left this place for more than a year.”

The inspiration for our conversation is San Francisco Opera’s revival of Hockney’s luminous production of Richard Strauss’ mythic opera Die Frau ohne Schatten, first presented in 1992 at the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden, with performances in 1993 in Los Angeles and then in Australia, where Hockney remembers fondly they were given three weeks on stage to perfect the complex lighting design that plays such a crucial role.

Flashback to October 1993. David Hockney, director John Cox, and Los Angeles Opera’s executive director, Peter Hemmings, are gathered for a news conference at the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion to discuss the creation of Die Frau ohne Schatten. When a question is asked regarding Turandot) replied, “David needs music to respond to, rather than text. As David likes to say, ‘The composer was responding to the text when he wrote the music. All I need to do is listen to the music.’ When you move people around in David’s spaces, you’re moving people around in his pictures.”

Hemmings added, “In the end, I don’t think anybody actually chooses David to design an opera. He chooses you.”

Many artists, once they’ve found a formula to establish their careers, are content to repeat it over and over. That is not David Hockney. As he approaches his 86th birthday in July, he has never ceased asking questions and exploring new ways of creating and perceiving art—whether it’s his vast portfolio of paintings in oils and now on his iPad; his multiple-perspective collage approach to photography; his wall-sized exhibitions that were sent around the globe by fax; or his latest experiment in immersive environments, Bigger & Closer, currently being presented at London’s new Lightroom art space adjacent to King’s Cross Station.

It was this constant desire to explore new ways of making art that led me to ask, “When you were a kid, David, were you always asking questions?”

“Oh yes,” he says with a broad smile. “Yes, I was. My mother said I was too curious. I was always asking questions about how pictures are made. I think that’s a good question. I’ve never stopped asking questions.”

It was in March and April of 1991 that Hockney began a series of abstract paintings that would later evolve into the set designs for Die Frau ohne Schatten.

“Those ‘Snail Space Paintings’ looked abstract, but they were really studies about form and space. They were not meant as sets, but when I was painting them, Strauss’ music was always in the back of my mind. That’s when I discovered you could make the color fields shift and change perspective by changing the colors of the light.”

To illustrate the concept, Hockney created a large-scale version in his studio that covered a wall and melded onto the floor. He then installed a lighting grid and invited friends to sit and watch as he transformed the painting’s forms by varying the light to operatic accompaniment. The effect was magical.

“When we started working on Frau we built a large model of the stage with its own lighting grid in my home studio. Then we made models of the sets and costumes (by the late Ian Falconer). John Cox would come over and we would sit and listen to the opera for hours and ideas would present themselves. We lit the whole three-and-a-half-hour opera with all the effects.”

The large stage model was an expansion of a concept that Hockney had conceived years before when he and Los Angeles Philharmonic Music Director Zubin Mehta would gather in the studio and play with lights as they prepared a 1987 production of Tristan und Isolde in Los Angeles.

As Hockney and Cox worked together, a crucial question involved how to stage the opera’s transformative final scenes.

“Hofmannsthal’s libretto describes a beautiful landscape with a golden river sweeping through it. We realized the Golden River could represent the life force. But the opera doesn’t end there. It ends in the future with the voices of unborn children singing. The river then comes toward the audience to become a tree of life. I think it fits the music very well. I had friends that didn’t care for the opera. But when they saw mine, they said now they could hear the music.”

2023 Adler Fellows

As Adler Fellows, emerging singers and pianists receive rigorous individualized coaching as well as opportunities to cover and perform roles in mainstage performances. Our Adler Friends and Sponsors play a vital role in their training, nurturing the talent and creativity of these budding artists and ensuring they reach their full potential as part of the program. We are extremely grateful for our Friends of Adler and Adler Sponsor support received between August 1, 2021 and May 7, 2023. * Deceased
There’s a rather imposing word often used in relation to Wagner’s operas: Gesamtkunstwerk. It translates as “total work of art” and represents the complete integration of all art forms in one experience. While a philosophical German concept, it serves as a broader encapsulation of the synergy between the arts, manifested so perfectly in opera.

This summer’s operas pay homage to the integration of music and art, and the tradition of famous artists finding an outlet on the opera stage, which, in our case, is a 50-foot-wide canvas surrounded by the most ornate, gilded picture frame. It is not surprising that artists feel the urge to ‘paint’ on so vast a canvas. Artists like Marc Chagall, Salvador Dalí, Maurice Sendak, Jun Kaneko, Anish Kapoor, and Monty Python animator Terry Gilliam have all felt the allure of the proscenium.

This summer, Die Frau ohne Schatten honors maybe the greatest artistic visionary of the opera stage: David Hockney. His expressions of art and music represent extraordinary journeys of light, color, shape, and form, as we’ve seen in his Turandot, Magic Flute, Tristan und Isolde, and The Rake’s Progress. These are intricately undertaken projects, often conceived with an elaborate set model on which Hockney would stage scenes with miniature characters. Hockney once noted “I stay up nights and fiddle with my opera designs. It’s a bit obsessive. That’s why I can’t do it all the time.” Jun Kaneko, whose productions of Magic Flute and Madame Butterfly we’ve had on our stage, went similarly deep, listening to an opera 300 times before even drawing a line.

David Hockney was joined for Die Frau ohne Schatten by costume designer Ian Falconer, who also designed costumes for our Turandot. Ian became even more famous as an illustrator, conceiving the Olivia children’s books. He should have been with us this summer but tragically passed away in March aged just 63.

Another costume designer who should have been with us this summer is Kenzō Takada, the Japanese fashion designer and founder of the Parisian fashion house KENZO. He created the costumes for our new co-production of Madame Butterfly. The fusion of fashion and opera has created some extraordinary visuals over the years: think Christian Lacroix’s Capuleti e i Montecchi from 2012 or Bob Mackie’s 1989 Lulu. For Butterfly, Kenzō reimagined traditional Japanese design, with kimonos that honor the past but push into the future. Kenzō very sadly passed away from Covid in October 2020.

Our third work of the summer integrates the world of visual design into the very story of the opera. El último sueño de Frida y Diego is a metaphysical dreamscape in which Diego Rivera reconnects with Frida Kahlo after her death through the medium of painting. Here, music illuminates art in a twist on the other examples of art illuminating music.

The history of opera design is a chronicle of theatrical genius, with theatrical designers creating fantastical worlds out of a simple black box. But there is a particular magic that can happen when an artist comes into our space from outside the theater and explores their aesthetic at our epic scale. This summer we honor all those who design for the stage, particularly Kenzō Takada and Ian Falconer who cannot be with us, and we celebrate the visionary minds who conceive these expressions of total art, inviting us into something larger than life.
