Part 1

Dead, stranded, going to die . Morgan, a 10 year old girl who is very interested in animals and plants, wanted to go visit Mount Florist . She packed her stuff which would last for only 4 days . Morgan also brought her science tools. When she started to hike north up the large, oversized, massive, green mountain a giant thunderstorm flew up. The sound from the banging of the thunder was like 11 massive bombs going off all at once during a war. The very windy mountain was filled with dark, haunted, gray clouds. The tall willow trees were blowing so fast they looked like a windmill spinning 47 miles an hour. Morgan felt scared, terrified, lonely, cold and most importantly worthless. She thought she was going to get struck by lightning, thought she was going to die. The rain, almost like a downpour, was gushing down so fast that it could fill 97 buckets a minute . It was as if the lightning was like 1,000 fireworks falling from the sky . Morgan started running , hiking up the mountain so far she could not escape . Morgan still saw the whole mountain, and the sky, and the sea. Luckily, she was stranded on the part of the mountain that was woods. deep, dark, lonely woods. Over time she started to adapt to the environment she was stranded in. Morgan used her science tools to cut down trees . She used the wood to make a fire, some type of hut to sleep in and most importantly a big basket . The basket was the key to it all. Morgan would use the basket to collect plants . Plants to eat and plants to study . Then, she realized it was getting dark, so she quickly collected her tools and baskets, then dozed off to sleep.

Cheep, cheap, cheap . CHEEP CHEEP ! "Ahhhh!", screamed Morgan. An annoying, loud chirping blue bird was flying all around Morgan's hut. She was awakened from her sleep. Morgan was really confused and she didn't know what to do or what was happening. She finally realized what the bluebird was trying to say to her. Morgan followed the bird through the woods and stopped at a large oak tree with a bird's nest on top. Suddenly, she heard a sound behind her and saw two baby birds on the ground. Just then, she noticed that the mother was in her nest , so Morgan took the baby birds back up the tree and started walking back to her camp with a bluebird, she named Blanca. Later that day she grabbed her biggest basket and started to go look for plants and berries to make her three meals for the day. As Morgan was hiking to search for food, she came across a huge field of flowers! She saw red, orange, yellow, green, blue, purple, pink and white flowers. Morgan saw so many flowers that she thought they could go on forever and ever. Then, she picked each and every petal off of each and every flower and headed back to camp for dinner. Morgan made a salad with wild berries on it. Then she went to bed.

When Morgan woke up the next morning, she got an excellent idea. "What if I make pictures out of the petals?" said Morgan. And she did. Morgan made a lion, a bluebird, the sun and the Earth and her most favorite one, a wooden basket with petals overflowing on the sides. After three weeks, Morgan became very scared and wanted to go home. "Wait!" screamed Morgan. She remembered that she packed her walky talky's just in case of an emergency. As Morgan turned it on, she heard this, "Morgan are you ok? Can you hear me? It's me, Paige." She was in shock. Morgan pressed the button and said, "Yes, yes I can hear you. Come rescue me. I'm on the south side of the mountain close to our science lab." A couple hours have passed and Morgan started to hear yelling, and a ton of animals were running toward her. She quickly grabbed her stuff and started to follow the animals. It turns out that her friend Paige from the science lab had come to rescue her! "Paige, I never thought you would find me.", said Morgan. "Wow, what are those?" said Paige. "There are pictures with many petals and leaves I found to study," said Morgan. When they returned home, they researched the plants and discovered two new species of plant 'Cybolieth' and "Maragia". When they went home, they told all of their friends about the crazy adventure.
