In 1924, two brilliant, wealthy teenagers from Chicago's elite shocked the nation by committing a cold-blooded murder—just to see if they could get away with it.

Deadly Alliance dives into the twisted minds of Nathan Leopold and Richard Loeb, who lured 14-year-old Bobby Franks to his death in what they called the "perfect crime." Their arrogance unraveled within days, thanks to a pair of glasses and a trail of careless clues.

The program features newly uncovered letters, photos, and documents from Loeb's estate, shedding fresh light on a case that has haunted Chicago for a century. With gripping storytelling, expert interviews, and rare archival footage, it explores how this murder became one of the most sensational trials in American history.

Enter Clarence Darrow—the legendary defense attorney—who delivered a historic, emotionally charged plea against the death penalty that spared the boys' lives.

Deadly Alliance is a chilling look at privilege, hubris, and the dark side of human nature.

Prohibition

Ken Burns and Lynn Novick's Prohibition, a three-part, six-hour documentary series, tells the sweeping story of one of America's most ambitious and ultimately disastrous social experiments.

When Prohibition went into effect in 1920, it aimed to reduce alcohol abuse and strengthen families. Instead, it turned millions of Americans into lawbreakers overnight. People brewed moonshine at home, speakeasies thrived, and by the late 1920s, the U.S. had become the world's largest importer of cocktail shakers.

The law's consequences were far-reaching. Organized crime flourished, law enforcement was overwhelmed and often corrupted, and for the first time, plea bargaining became common to manage overcrowded courts. Rather than promoting temperance, Prohibition fueled excess.

Economically, the damage was severe. Thousands of jobs vanished as breweries and saloons shut down. States like New York lost major revenue—up to 75% of it had come from liquor taxes. Nationally, the federal government lost $11 billion in tax revenue and spent over $300 million trying to enforce the law.

Intended to elevate the moral fabric of the nation, Prohibition instead exposed deep divisions and raised difficult questions about the role of government and morality. By 1933, the 18th Amendment was repealed, marking the end of an era—and the beginning of a new caution in how America enshrines values into law.

Hardhat Riot

This gripping documentary revisits the Hard Hat Riot of May 8, 1970, when a mob of construction workers stormed through Lower Manhattan to attack antiwar demonstrators in a heated clash of class tension and political unrest. Set against the backdrop of the Vietnam War and Nixon's presidency, the film traces the deep divisions between working-class New Yorkers and the broader antiwar movement—capturing the erupting violence and the fraught social fault lines it revealed. The documentary offers a searing, focused look at a pivotal moment when patriotism, labor identity, and dissent collided.

Becoming Frida Kahlo

Discover the real Frida beyond the myths in Becoming Frida Kahlo, a deeply human three-part documentary that unpacks the life of one of Mexico's most iconic artists. From her childhood polio to the devastating 1925 bus crash, Kahlo transformed suffering into art—each self-portrait a visceral expression of pain, resilience, and identity.

The series explores her stormy marriage to muralist Diego Rivera (twice married, twice divorced), their political alliances—including connections to Trotsky—and her artistic rise amid Depression-era America's inequality. Through archival footage, family perspectives, and expert commentary, viewers see how tragedy informed her bold, surreal work and shaped her legacy as a feminist and cultural icon.

BIG CATS 24/7 – Season 2

Season 2 of Big Cats 24/7 takes viewers deep into Botswana's Okavango Delta as a team of wildlife filmmakers spends six months tracking lions, leopards, and cheetahs continuously—day and night. Across six episodes, audiences follow individual big cats as they navigate wildfires, floods, and fierce competition for survival in a transforming landscape.

Using breakthrough low-light cameras, drones, and long-term observation, the series captures rare nocturnal hunts, cub-rearing hardships, and territorial battles in vivid detail. Highlights include rogue male lions staking claims, lioness mothers defending cubs from intruders, and cheetah families teaching their young to hunt—all set amid shifting prey populations and extreme weather patterns.

Each episode charts a critical arc in the cats' lives, building narrative momentum and concluding with emotionally charged cliffhangers. The storytelling blends cinematic grandeur with intimate moments—bringing viewers as close as possible to these magnificent creatures and their deeply human crew.

THIRST FOR POWER

Thirst for Power unveils the intricate relationship between water and energy, tracing humanity's quest for abundant resources from ancient Roman aqueducts to modern hydroelectric dams. This documentary explores how civilizations have harnessed water to generate power and the vulnerabilities inherent in our water-dependent energy systems. Through historical and contemporary lenses, it examines the challenges and innovations in managing these vital resources. The film underscores the critical need for sustainable practices to ensure a balanced future where both water and energy are preserved for generations to come.

NOVA

Human

"Human" on Nova is a stunning five-part documentary series hosted by paleo-anthropologist Ella Al-Shamahi. Spanning 300,000 years, it traces the extraordinary story of how Homo sapiens rose from being one of many human species to the only one left—and how that story shapes who we are today.

When our species emerged in Africa, we were not alone. At least six other human species roamed the Earth, from the tool-making Homo erectus to the mysterious Denisovans and the diminutive Homo floresiensis, known as "The Hobbit." Using groundbreaking fossil discoveries, ancient DNA analysis, and cinematic reenactments, the series reconstructs how we outlasted them all.

Each episode focuses on a pivotal chapter: our origins in Africa, our journey across the globe, the extinction of our sister species, the peopling of the Americas, and finally, the gamble of permanent settlement. From 10-foot-tall Ice Age bears to the invention of the alphabet in a Sinai desert mine, the series brings our prehistory vividly to life.

La Recua: The Mule Pack Train

This PBS special follows 70-year-old vaquero Dario Higuera Meza as he revives the centuries-old tradition of mule packing on a 200-mile trek along the historic El Camino Real in Baja California Sur. With a train of mules loaded with goods, Dario and his companions face rugged terrain and rattlesnakes while honoring a vanishing way of life. A vivid journey through history, culture, and the spirit of endurance. In Spanish with English subtitles.

SACRED PLANET WITH GULNAZ KHAN

Host Gulnaz Khan travels the globe to spotlight sacred sites under threat from climate change. This four-part series explores how faith leaders and Indigenous communities draw on ancient spiritual traditions to respond to ecological crisis with resilience, wisdom, and hope.

From Colombia's high-altitude Arhuaco communities to Japan's ancient forests and Peru's melting glaciers, Khan reveals stories of environmental loss—but also of faith-born innovation. Viewers meet leaders protecting sacred mountains and regenerating degraded landscapes through sustainable rituals and storytelling.

Sacred Planet mixes breathtaking visuals, first-person reporting, and intimate dialogue with those preserving spiritual heritage amid global warming. Each episode invites reflection on the deep ties between faith, land, and climate action, offering unexpected pathways toward healing our planet.

A vital blend of culture, conservation, and spirituality, Sacred Planet transforms the climate crisis into a call to collective stewardship rooted in wisdom that spans centuries—and continents.

Charlie Bee Company

Season 2

The new season delivers eight hour-long episodes of wild Texas beekeeping as Charlie Agar rescues Africanized honeybees from desperate, dangerous situations—never knowing what to expect when facing an angry hive. Highlights include massive removals from quirky roadside structures, commercial prep for almond pollination, and hidden swarms in suburban homes. Each sting brings new lessons about bees, while the series champions global pollinator conservation with equal parts adventure and education.

American MASTERS

This cinematic portrait dives into the fiery life of José Clemente Orozco (1883–1949), one of Mexico's most revolutionary muralists. It celebrates artistic tenacity, political passion, and how art can light the way through suffering.

Despite losing his left hand in a youth accident, battling rheumatic fever, and enduring the destruction of his early work by U.S. customs agents, Orozco remained fiercely committed to his vision.

"Man of Fire" maps his journey from the violence of the Mexican Revolution to the walls of American public buildings under Roosevelt's New Deal—a movement inspired by the Mexican muralists.

The documentary highlights Orozco's influence on generations of artists—from Thomas Hart Benton to the Chicano mural movement—and frames his border-crossing career as emblematic of immigrant resilience.

Becoming Thurgood: America's Social Architect

Becoming Thurgood: America's Social Architect is a compelling documentary that chronicles the life and legacy of Thurgood Marshall, the first African American Supreme Court Justice. The film delves into his pivotal role in dismantling institutional racism, highlighting his leadership in landmark cases such as Brown v. Board of Education, which led to the desegregation of public schools. The documentary paints a portrait of a man whose legal prowess and unwavering commitment to justice reshaped American society. It underscores Marshall's enduring influence on civil rights and his dedication to the principle that the law should serve all people equally.
