From the Chief Executive Officer

Welcome to 2026! Though last year had its challenges, with the cut in federal funding for public media, we still had a great year in so many ways. Our talented staff won numerous awards, including four Public Media Awards, five Bronze Telly Awards, six Emmy Awards, the Darden Award and many more. We also had a year full of notable events—including the screening of a phenomenal film on the historic battlefield in Yorktown. Thank you to each of you who supported us throughout the last year.

2026 is shaping up to be just as full and exciting. We are entering the second year of our partnership with Virginia Humanities, and applications are open for grants supporting Hampton Roads' museums, libraries, historic sites, and other cultural nonprofits. The deadline to apply is April 30. Learn more at whro.org/humanities

I'm also excited to announce the promotion of Kate Pringle, CFRE, to Vice President of Development, effective January 17, 2026. Kate assumes the role following the announcement of Chief Development Officer Tom Burton's upcoming retirement. I've known Tom for many years and I thank him for his years of excellent service to WHRO and the community. Enjoy your retirement, Tom!

We also kick off a new season of student competitions at the start of the new year. The TowneBank Spelling Bee will be held in the next few months. You can watch it on WHRO TV on April 4. Our annual PBS KIDS Writers Contest is accepting entries now through March 20. You can learn more about the contest on page 9. And, the Great Computer Challenge includes two events held at Old Dominion University in the spring. It is always a highlight for schools throughout our region.

We also continue to feature new local content on WHRO+, our free streaming app. A few recent additions include WHRO Public Lens, The Story Exchange, and Time Machine Video. If you haven't downloaded it, you're missing out! Visit whro.org/plus to learn more—we even have several community sessions scheduled to walk you through how to use the app.

Thank you to each of you who generously contributed to the station last year, attended our events, shared your opinions about our programming, and recommended us to your friends and family. Without your support we could not do the work we do. Thank you for being a member of WHRO. We look forward to another great year of serving our amazing community!

WHRO Public Media Honored as a 2025 Darden Award Winner

WHRO Public Media was selected as the corporate honoree for the 2025 Darden Awards, a prestigious honor conveyed by the CIVIC Leadership Institute. The Darden Award is presented to individuals and organizations whose vision and service strengthen the region.

President and CEO of the CIVIC Leadership Institute, Dr. Mary Kate Andris, highlighted WHRO's "decades of service in education, public media, and regional collaboration that enriches the lives of all who call this community home" in her comments within the award ceremony program.

"For more than 60 years, WHRO has helped our community feel smarter and happier through the power of nonprofit media, which makes them the natural next choice for the Corporate Darden Award," Andris said.

"The award is in recognition of regional leadership," said WHRO President and CEO, Bert Schmidt, "and I would suggest that WHRO is the best example of regional cooperation in Hampton Roads."

From its early beginnings as a partner to local schools, bringing televised teaching into homes through the power of media, to its current vast array of offerings for teachers and school divisions, education remains at the heart of the organization's mission. Though most people are more familiar with the organization's six television stations and five radio stations, educators have come to rely on the professional development opportunities, online courses, reading and STEM programs, and annual student competitions that WHRO Education provides throughout the region.

Locals also rely on the station for solid news reporting. After observing that local news coverage was shrinking, WHRO launched a newsroom dedicated to local reporting. Starting with three reporters initially, the journalism team has expanded to 15 people, including an investigative team. WHRO reporters cover education, sea level rise, military and veterans, business, health, state and local government, and more.

These services, combined with the arts, music, and public affairs programming that WHRO provides, make the organization a key service provider in the region.

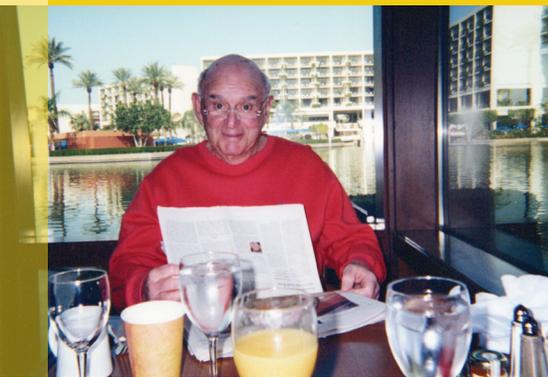

"Our role is to make people smarter and happier through the power of public media," Schmidt said.

A Legacy of Trust

Celebrating a Lifelong Commitment to Journalism

Behind the headlines, Sheldon Puritz was many things—Navy veteran, father, salesman, favorite uncle, character with a wry sense of humor, volunteer, lover of public media—but to his family, the most enduring through-line was his deep respect for journalism and the role it plays in a healthy democracy. Sheldon believed in journalism that was thorough, reliable and unbiased. An avid consumer of news, he brought a keen sense of curiosity and critical thinking to every story, always asking who created it, how it was sourced, and why it mattered. He passed this sense of responsibility on to his daughters, Holly Puritz and Leslie Kneller, and to the many friends and family members he touched throughout his life.

“He truly believed that being informed was part of being a good citizen,” recalled Steve Wohlgemuth, Sheldon’s son-in-law. Sheldon’s commitment to public media was lifelong. Sheldon approached the news with intention, engaging fully with the issues of the day and encouraging others to do the same. Whether listening to NPR, watching PBS, or sparking thoughtful conversation at the dinner table, he welcomed differing perspectives and valued debate—urging those around him not just to consume information, but to question it, understand it, and form their own well-reasoned views. “He loved the debate,” Leslie said. “He wanted you to have an opinion and be able to back it up.”

That passion was deeply rooted in Sheldon’s character and patriotism. At just 17, he joined the U.S. Navy during World War II, a decision Holly believes reflected his profound sense of civic duty—one that later shaped his belief in ethical, nonpartisan journalism. “Dad was a deeply generous person who was devoted to the betterment of his family and community,” Holly shared. “This gift is for him, and for the kind of thoughtful, trustworthy reporting he believed the world needs—now more than ever.”

In memory of Sheldon, and in honor of what would have been his 100th birthday on August 14, 2026, Holly Puritz and Steve Wohlgemuth have made a significant gift to WHRO News to establish the Sheldon Puritz Journalism Focus Fund. Focus funds allow donors to direct major gifts toward strategic priorities that empower WHRO to strengthen its service to the community. Alongside funds supporting education and classical music, the Sheldon Puritz Journalism Focus Fund ensures the future of trustworthy, local journalism—exactly the kind Sheldon championed.
