ON THE COVER

THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION

Sunday, November 16 @ 7 p.m.

A sweeping six-part documentary explores the struggle for independence and the birth of a nation. Through vivid storytelling and diverse perspectives—soldiers, civilians, enslaved people, and Native nations—it reveals the ideals, conflicts, and contradictions of America's Revolution and its lasting impact on freedom, identity, and democracy. Tune in Sunday, November 16 at 7 p.m.

WALRUS: LIFE ON THIN ICE

Monday, November 24 @ 7 p.m.

A gripping Arctic journey reveals how walrus struggle to survive as sea ice vanishes. Stunning footage follows mothers, calves, and scientists confronting the realities of a warming world, exploring the species' resilience, vulnerability, and deep connection to Indigenous cultures amid the accelerating effects of climate change. Tune in Monday, November 24 at 7 p.m.

K'ETNIYI: THE LAND IS SPEAKING TO US

Sunday, November 2 @ 5 p.m.

& Wednesday, November 26 @ 8 p.m.

An immersive journey through Alaska's Lake Clark National Park reveals how Indigenous Dena'ina knowledge and modern science intertwine to understand a living landscape. Tune in for the broadcast premiere Sunday, November 2 @ 5 p.m. or catch the encore presentation Wednesday, November 26 at 8 p.m.

A LEGACY IN FOCUS: KAKM'S 50TH ANNIVERSARY TV FESTIVAL

Two nights of unforgettable television, live engagement, and a celebration of Alaska's public media legacy.

Alaska Public Media's year-long celebration of KAKM's 50th anniversary continues with a special two-night TV Festival on KAKM. Tune in Sunday and Monday, November 23 and 24, for evenings of compelling storytelling and stunning visuals that reflect the values and legacy of public broadcasting in Alaska.

Both evenings feature live studio broadcasts with Alaska Public Media hosts and a team of phone volunteers standing by to take your calls. It's a chance to support the station that's served generations of Alaskans while enjoying programs that inform, inspire, and connect our community. Viewers who make a gift during the festival can also claim exclusive KAKM 50th anniversary swag as a thank-you for their support.

The celebration begins Sunday, November 23, at 3 p.m. with a powerful two-hour installment of the Series Finale of Ken Burns: The American Revolution. This riveting conclusion explores the final chapter of America's struggle for independence, combining breathtaking imagery, expert commentary, and firsthand accounts to bring history to life.

On Monday, November 24, the festival continues at 7 p.m. with Nature's Walrus: Life on Thin Ice, a poignant and visually rich documentary examining the challenges faced by Pacific walrus populations in a rapidly changing Arctic.

Then at 8 p.m., enjoy Ken Burns: The National Parks, a sweeping tribute to the people and places that shaped "America's best idea."

Tune in and join us as we celebrate five decades of KAKM's service to Alaska and look ahead to the future of public media in our state. With award-winning documentaries, live community engagement, and special donor perks, this TV Festival is a can't-miss event.

HOME AGAIN IN THE YORKSHIRE DALES

The war is over, but life's challenges—and its quiet joys—carry on for the beloved vets of All Creatures Great and Small.

The hills of Yorkshire are alive with change as peace finally settles over postwar England. The veterinarians of Darrowby return to a world transformed—one where old routines give way to new beginnings, and even the most familiar faces must find their place in a society learning to heal. Amid rolling green fields and the comforting hum of rural life, the practice at Skeldale House enters a new era shaped by hope, adaptation, and the enduring bonds between people and the animals they serve.

This new season of the beloved MASTERPIECE drama All Creatures Great and Small moves the story into 1945, as the war ends and a new chapter begins for James Herriot, Siegfried Farnon, and Mrs. Hall. Change arrives in many forms—scientific advances in veterinary medicine, families growing and shifting, and a countryside both grateful for peace and uncertain about the future. Familiar friendships deepen, new characters arrive in Darrowby, and the rhythm of farm life beats on with the same humor, heart, and humanity that made the series a modern classic.

Nicholas Ralph, Samuel West, and Anna Madeley reprise their roles alongside a mix of returning favorites and fresh faces who bring new warmth and vitality to the village. As the vets confront everything from injured livestock to emotional farewells, they rediscover what truly matters—compassion, community, and the quiet heroism of everyday care.

Filmed once again amid the breathtaking landscapes of the Yorkshire Dales, the series continues its signature blend of gentle wit, stunning scenery, and heartfelt storytelling. With postwar Britain in transition, All Creatures Great and Small reminds viewers that even in changing times, kindness never goes out of style—returning to MASTERPIECE in January 2026 for a sixth season. Catch up on the first five seasons on PBS.org with AK Passport.

TROUBLE AT SEA

A powerful new documentary explores how the disappearance of wild salmon reshapes life along Alaska's Yukon River.

Along Alaska's vast Yukon River, a once-reliable way of life is vanishing. Generations of Indigenous and rural families who depended on wild salmon are facing an uncertain future as the fish that sustained their culture, economy, and spirit fail to return in the numbers they once did. The sudden collapse of these salmon runs has rippled through entire communities, threatening food security, identity, and deep ecological balance in one of the world's most remote and beautiful regions.

This new PBS documentary confronts the crisis head-on, tracing how changing ocean conditions, warming waters, and habitat loss have disrupted a finely tuned natural rhythm. Scientists, fishers, and tribal leaders offer urgent, firsthand perspectives on what's happening beneath the surface—and what's at stake if the Yukon's salmon never recover. The film captures a stark collision between climate change and cultural continuity, exploring both the science of decline and the human cost of environmental disruption.

Trouble at Sea moves beyond the statistics to reveal the emotional heart of the story. Viewers meet families forced to abandon traditions that defined their summers, elders who remember abundance now replaced by scarcity, and young people searching for new ways to live in harmony with a transforming ecosystem. The documentary weaves scientific insight with local knowledge, showing that solutions will require respect for both.

This special film balances heartbreak with resilience. Communities are adapting, organizing, and working with researchers to understand how warming oceans and shifting currents can devastate an entire way of life—and what can still be done to restore balance. Powerful and deeply human, the program offers a window into the challenges facing the North and a reflection of global change unfolding in real time.

Tune in to Alaska Public Media TV on Tuesday, November 25 at 7 p.m. or stream it on PBS.org after the broadcast premiere.

K'ETNIYI: THE LAND IS SPEAKING TO US

A journey through Alaska's Lake Clark reveals how Indigenous wisdom and modern science meet in harmony with the land.

In the heart of southwest Alaska, where glacial rivers feed wild salmon runs and volcanoes rise above misted forests, the land itself seems to breathe. Across seasons, Dena'ina elders, local residents, and park scientists walk together through this living landscape, listening for what it has to say. Their journey reveals not just stunning wilderness, but a worldview in which every element—bear, tree, water, mountain—has spirit and voice.

Filmed in Lake Clark National Park and Preserve, this new documentary invites audiences to see nature not as scenery but as kin. The Dena'ina people have lived in this region for thousands of years, guided by a belief that the land is a teacher, constantly communicating lessons about balance and respect. Through their stories and daily practices, viewers glimpse how traditional knowledge endures even amid modern change.

K'etniyi: The Land Is Speaking to Us bridges two ways of knowing—Indigenous wisdom and Western science. Park biologists share insights on the same ecosystems that elders describe through ancestral memory, revealing how both perspectives illuminate a deeper understanding of interconnection. The film's title, from the Dena'ina language, translates as "the land is speaking to us," a message that resonates far beyond Alaska's borders.

Visually breathtaking and spiritually grounded, the hour-long documentary captures salmon surging upstream, storms sweeping across tundra, and quiet moments of reflection beside ancient waters. Yet its greatest power lies in its simplicity: an invitation to listen. In every sound of the wind, every ripple in a stream, the land speaks—reminding us that our survival depends on hearing it. This film offers both a tribute to enduring culture and a call to care for the living world that sustains us all.

Tune in Sunday, November 2 at 5 p.m. or catch it again Wednesday, November 26 at 8 p.m. Stream it anytime on PBS.org after the broadcast premiere.
