Last in the five-part series from Radiolab

Radiolab Presents: More Perfect

Friday, November 3 at 7pm on WBAA News on 105.9 FM and AM 920

At the trial of James Batson in 1982, the prosecution eliminated all the black jurors from the jury pool. Batson objected, setting off a complicated discussion about jury selection that would make its way all the way up to the Supreme Court. On this final episode of the five-part series More Perfect, the Supreme Court ruling that was supposed to prevent race-based jury selection, but may have only made the problem worse: Batson v. Kentucky.
